

THE NEW ENCOUNTER

If I could tell the world what I feel at times, she would slap me in the face; for no one given the breath of life should feel selfpity.

Everyone has an ultimate dream, but only the fool dreams of ultimate freedom.
Debbie Price

1974 NEW ENCOUNTER A First For Rockingham Community College
Wentworth
North Carolina

Susie Clayton

Susie Clayton
1980

A True Story

Have you ever watched an ant trapped in a sand pit?

The pit is built by an ant lion, an insect that sits on the rim of the pit and watches his victim struggle futilely to crawl out. The slopes are constructed at just the right angle so that the sand loses its cohesive qualities. The sand particles break apart as the ant struggles and send the ant tumbling back to the bottom. The lion ant waits until his prey is overcome with exhaustion; then he kills.

I was like that ant in 1961 when I was a member of a 147-member team that took part in the Bay of Pigs Invasion.

I flattened out on my stomach, while tumbling down a slope, and tried to find a handhold with my fingers. But the Cuban clay is worse than sand. There is a skim covering the clay which lets your fingers slide through. The clay is volcanic ash, but it seems more like water.

A machine gun was chattering its song of death as the bullets dug deeply into the clay. One bullet sent a shower of dust into my eyes. I choked, sucking more dust into my lungs. At 12,000 feet I was having enough trouble just trying to breathe.

My troubles seemed close to ending. I was really falling now! The whole slope of volcanic ash and clay disintegrated. Rocks were falling. First little ones, then boulders. Trying to protect my head with my hands, I was suddenly tossed up in a cartwheel. The sound of tons of rock and ash breaking loose was deafening. I fell back but started to grope my way back up again. When I felt solid stone I wedged myself into a crevasse. I had landed on a small ledge; and I knew I had a chance to live if I could cling to the crevasse and if the ledge didn't slip.

The rock slide continued for another 60 seconds or so. The silence afterwards was overwhelming, awesome, and broken only by the shrill calls of ravens.

My bloodshot eyes teared, washing the dust out. The landscape below was buried. A rivulet of ash and shale still stirred. Even under the protection of my crevasse, I was buried in ash up to my thighs.

After about 30 minutes I heard them coming — two men; their feet slapping the debris at regular intervals so I could tell they were using rapes. When they paused, I could hear them poking about in the rocks with rifle butts. Finally they moved below me, about 50 feet to my left.

The men wore ash-covered combat uniforms, apparently from P.O.W.'s or dead soldiers. Each held a nylon rope in one hand and a semi-automatic 9MM in the other hand. Their similarity to an American G.I. ended. One of the men was a young gold-colored Chicana who had a robust appearance. The second was old and very darkened by the sun; he was as thin as an ironwood tree, and he clamped a cold cigar in his teeth.

I set the sights of my Colt Automatic .45 on one man and then on the other man, thinking of my buddies' annihilation and how I'd love to have the Army recruiter with me. Most .45's have a long trigger pull. Mine didn't. The hammer came forward the instant I squeezed.

The Chicana's head snapped back as the bullet sang inches from his head. The old man clamped his cigar in a face-splitting grin. He had a strange sense of humor. As he lifted his semi-automatic, the Chicane stopped him and said to me in English, "Now don't tell me you're angry, Sarge." He laughed, "We can help you or destroy you."

I cursed him, my C.O., Cuba, President Kennedy, and of course, the Army recruiter with his talk of how the Army builds men.

I remember glancing up in case another slide was starting. I expected to see the ugly snout of a machine gun, or at least the heads of a gun crew peering down at me. There was nothing but black ash and volcanic rock.

Facing the Chicano, I asked him why he had spared me? He spoke to his pardner, and they both began laughing. Then he turned to me and said that he thought I'd make a good training exercise.

To think a turncoat, traitorous Chinaco could laugh at a Ranger and use him as a "training exercise" infuriated me. My thumb tightened against the grip of my .45.

"How many others of my company have you used for training purposes?"

He laughed and translated to his pardner. Still laughing he answered, "None! It just so happens that you are the last left alive."

I could hear again the words of my Ranger school instructor, "Always do the unexpected, covered with a smile and a soft voice."

"Alright," I answered gently, "and now it's time for your training."

I shot the Chicana and his dark-skinned pardner off their rapes.

What was it they said in Ranger training? "Fear can be conquered," according to Army recruiter, career combat specialist, and Ranger instructors. You are trained to control emotions, think rationally, and build self-confidence to such a degree you'll think you're unbeatable, not only collectively, as a team, but also as an individual.

This incident was the most terrifying of my life, but my training as a member of the 19th Rangers helped me to survive the Bay of Pigs fiasco and return to the states only slightly wounded.

I was awarded the silver star. For bravery?

The End

By Lacy Wray

Ever see a blossom a bud to be?
Or find an acorn the envy of oak tree?
A backward glance?
Nature wouldn't permit
such a dubious delight.
For the bud may finish
what the oak did start.
And round such a circle first and last remain far apart.

Paul Williamson

Outside

gazing into the white holes in all minds, seeing the bright stones of life —
until the guards see me, scream outward in arrows at the slit where my Face is hidden,
a slicking quick slash,
the lanterns in the shuffle, and a knight in night-armor, I i run from the well-lit place, and my arm, behind, bleeds.

Terry Mayew

christmas day 1973

God is a circle whose center is everywhere and circumference nowhere.
and this circle am i knowing no beginning knowing no end.

only a drop in a ring of tides to and fro things come and go and only now may be known.
as divine as the leaf
i touch first the sky
then lay upon the earth with each moment between no more winter than spring.

Paul Williamson

Like the dew that sparkles on the morning meadow — I see your loving smile, and know I cannot forget
All the times we've shared together.

And if that smile keeps sparkling, the days of our lives will rejoice — forever more . . .

Then, we shall attain the greatest reward on earth —
that being happiness.

Mike Brame

I want to write how I feel for you But I can't even dream of starting to.
 Who can tell about the gentle of holding?
 Just try to express the spring unfolding.
 How can I word the smile of smiling,
 The love of loving, the beguile of beguiling?

It's all so simple for you and me.
 Fancy words and a song won't make us be.
 All we need is to keep it burning 'Cause this old world will keep on turning
 If I can't say why we get along Since we don't need fancy words and a song.

Who are You?

I am to some but a memory,
 So insignificant and small.
 To some, I am but a number
 To others, I'm no one at all.

I am to some but a face
 To many I'm only a name.
 To a few, I am merely a shell,
 But to God, I'm always the same.

Sun peeking beyond tear-laden clouds — Flowers protruding timidly through the fertile, brown earth Birds emerging decrepitly from their protecting-shells —
 And while they bestow beauty, felicity, and necessities, Covetous smiles erupt from disgruntled frowns.
 Isn't it queer that simple, soulless beings are able to offer so much,
 While our greedy selves give so little?

On Loss of Innocence

Sometimes I remember my youth, Recolling my foith and my truth,
 And I marvel at my childish ways,
 Living for the warmth of the days.

And my arms were always stretched out,
 Not asking what life was about,
 Yet clinging to those willing to give
 But o smile, thus, a reason to live.

Yet I feel my arms growing weak
 And the warm days becoming bleak.
 Still, I long for the life I once knew,
 But cannot return because of you.

Pam Sounders

Portrait by Jessie Sutton

The enigma throbs.
The loud pulse pushing life.
A spasm over there, a Seizure behind me.

Once I rode oxygen cells, sliding, speeding, succeeding.
Through huge orteries in a tiny body.
The steady reliable beat seated me in a second of folding chair security — — a perfect fit.

The perpetual throb persists.
The punctual pulse pushes.
Seizures become repetitious.
But all is different now.
Outside is different from inside.

Paul Williamson

Sing a Song: A Response to Walt Whitman's Poem
"Song of Myself"

You sing your song and I begin to feel the melody; I can begin to see things as you see things as you see them and now I take them unto myself. I see things not with your eyes but as you have seen them. I make comment to you and follow you. Then my eyes are opened and I begin to sing your song. But, you are too great; you expand yourself; you travel beyond the bounds of time. You are the youth of all youths; the zest for life and the reach of life even if it draws its strength from a sun a thousand suns from mine. I go with you; I see with my own eyes; I see and know. So why do you try to confuse me? Why do you tell me of people and of life in such endless detail? Do you suppose I think them different from myself? You say at the age of thirty-seven you begin; no doubt at the age of thirty-eight you will also begin, because "Now" is what is important and yesterday is past and tomorrow is still a dream world that will be what today and tomorrow make from the things that are now. You say you are all things. If you believe this then why tell through endless lists each thing that you are.

You have the supreme knowledge of Gods. As it is spoken in the Bible, you have known the truth and the truth has set you free. You know back to the molten beginnings and so on to the last breath of any who shall ever live. But "Now" is life; you have said this and I believe you. I will bring what you say back; make it recede to one life and one time and point out the endings and sorrows that are bound up with living one life. I will not let you go beyond the relative bounds of truth with your multifaceted points of view. Any point of view is relative to your perception and you juggle points of view and precepts so that everything you see is truth. Take what I say as truth and in your own words I will prove that it is so. Follow me as I show that I have learned what you have also learned. Follow me as I am guided by you through my own memory. See that I have swum in the river and lounged beneath pine trees; known the thrill of youth. I have faced my opposite equal and smiled with a knowledge as old as time as I laughed with the red-faced girl and led her up the hill. I have lain at night and seen the stars and felt the forces of all the generations past beating in my heart. What there were, I partly am, and what I am, others will someday be. And, whether the focal point be stars or grass or a drink at a bar, or the use of hard drugs, the truth is there. It shows the infinite paths to unknown ends; but at the end of every path you come face to face with God. There are infinite places to double back and endless places to retreat but nowhere to hide.

Just as the 1970 "flower children" became the 1971 and 1972 "hippies" who saw the face of God at the end of a needle or on the mental fringe of mind destroying drugs, you retreated and doubled back when you contemplated the inhumanity of war and the senseless suffering and destruction of four hundred and twelve young men and the burning of an old mother. The "hippies" have become the "Jesus freaks" who are living in experimental communes in the tradition of the Puritans. They are on the frontier of the nonconformist movement that has once more in the cyclic affairs of man traveled a full circle. As for you, you stepped to a higher plane and drew different conclusions from the things that are encompassed by yourself. At the bottom of it all is truth and at the bottom of truth is life. Through all eternity moves the urge, the primitive procreative urge that speaks through time and through each blade of grass; and, indeed, through all things that live. All things were not then they are; and then are not once more, but the urge is always answered and they always live again. But, in the hard light of reality all these things encompass death and go beyond; but I, the individual, only live before death. I began; then I am; then I live. How? To what end, with what joy, happiness, sorrow, pain? These are the things that are my affairs, but not death. Through this you stand apart from me. You are me or rather, I, you. You are manifest in a great barrel of wheat, a field of wheat, a tremendous mass of all the grains of wheat, both past and present. I am one, only one grain of wheat in all the masses. You have expanded yourself, even though you cling to the face that you exist as only one. In your body and in your life you are but one, but in your mind and ideals you are all. You have spoken: "I know that the hand of God is the promise of my own, and I know that the spirit of God is the brother of my own, and that all the men ever born are also my brothers, and the women my sisters and lovers. So you embrace me and take me into yourself. And, it is always so, that as you perceive the truth about something you become that thing in the reality of your mind. In this, I follow you and I believe in you. But then you perceive part of the meaning of the grass; and as you perceive the grass you take it into yourself and grow even larger.

Now is when you reach the point of growing too large. How dare you say now that you are I for I have tasted my own blood. It is true that you have tried to encompass me for when I walked into battle you were with me. I, a being who is both unjust and cruel, not a fine hero like your four hundred and twelve young men. We stopped at the top of a hill overlooking a settlement of small farmers. I felt a stir within me, a bloodlust, an anticipation of the kill. My comrades and I are a savage band, free-booters, raiders. My muscles leaped and my heart pounded with the joy of the charge. And now I take you from your lofty perch and now you see and feel first-hand as the fire and fear, terror and death, are upon them in an instant. I rope and I kill, stabbing and rending, each one the equal to the other. Their fear is a living thing; as is my joy; and you are with me. You know my savage exaltation at their helplessness. But then, we are beaten back; they are reinforced by chance, by some strange circumstance. I flight like a fiend, like no being from earth. Each stab of my blade is joy; each foe's blood is a sacrifice on my altar. My own blood, my sweat and the heat and strength of my body is an epic poem; and you are with me. Then, I am beaten down, my strength ebbs and I look for rest. You know my fear; my panic is your panic. I fight with blind hope; fatigue and fear weigh my hand. At last, helpless and hysterical, I run, I look for life and you are there; and my search is your search. I fall sobbing and breathing the dust, tasting my own blood, lying face down in my own vomit. The light fades from my eyes and then you cry out; "Enough! Enough! Enough!" You start anew, "Corpses rise, gashes heal," You lied! You are me, and I, you, but you left me; and then the peace engulfed me. I did not care, it was kind; it was relief. No matter how much more suffering there will ever be, for me it was finished. I need endure no more.

So you see, I, the individual, am but one grain of wheat taken from the barrel; one grain taken from the mass that you are. Surely you know me; surely I am taken into account. Without the individual, there is no mass. Yet, I am one, you are many. I was not, then I am, then I will not be once more. The question is "Did I pass on life?" That is all that matters to you. The procreant urge must be appeased; all else is the affair of one grain that is one cell in a great body.

So now you have reached your higher plain; but, in doing so, you have lost the ability to be all things. It is clear to see that the brutal aspects of death and sorrow, and negative philosophies about life and all things cruel and unjust will no longer be a vocal part of you. You still profess to be all things but it is a hollow admission that in the heart of man there is the capacity to be cruel; there is the ability to find joy and a primitive fulfillment in the commission of atrocities.

You disdain sniveling and whimpering but you simply do not speak of the farmer who lives in a miserable sod hut and who is barely able to feed his sickly, ragged children. After a day of brutally hard labor, he collapses on a filthy mound of blankets piled on the dirt floor only to rise and face the same miserable existence after a few hours of uncomfortable sleep. Instead, you speak of the high-headed tiller of the soil who plows his own land with his own team. He is the strong-armed, honest-living, spirit of the American dream. He is the proud man who bows to no earthly king. He lives in a home built by his own hands and carves a living for himself and his family through the honest efforts of a healthy body and a pure mind. At night he sits at the door of his sod hut and smiles at his young wife and then looks peacefully at the stars above him and out over the great rolling prairie; then quietly strums his guitar, singing softly to his children.

It is not hard to see that the all-encompassing "Walt" will take unto himself the man who has the optimistic point of view. You see, it is all in the point of view. Both farmers are in the same situation. It is only their outlook that makes one a hero and the other worse than a slave.

You speak of death while life still goes on. Now, you are interested in politics, wars, markets, newspapers, school. You have spoken: "Magnifying and applying come I, Outbidding at the start the old cautious hucksters, Taking myself the exact dimensions of Jehovan," . . . and all other Gods. "Taking them all for what they are worth and not a cent more, . . . Accepting the rough deific sketched to fill out better in myself, bestowing them freely on each man and each woman I see, . . ." Now you are truthful in your concept of yourself; you take on the aspects of a God. From your lofty perch where you encompass all that is good (Good being defined by you as including both death and hardships), you disburse your great knowledge. It is your self-imposed mission to try to open the eyes of the first farmer, and, yes, even the warrior-raider whom you would have once professed to be. Once they see the road of life and walk it in the direction they freely choose, then they will be taken in by the great "Walt" who is truly a prophet or an angel; or a manifestation of the great life — God who is the basis of all religion.

You rise from your worship of every God ever worshipped through every rite that was ever known to mankind and you speak the age-old words of hope and faith. You give the age-old religious poltice that is the cure for all ills. Only this time, the worship is of no idol or of any image but of life itself. Like words spoken from the clouds, you speak for yourself as well as for all men and you say these words: "Be at peace bloody flukes of doubters and sullen mopers, I take my place among you as much as among any, The past is the push of you, me, all, precisely the same, And what is yet untried and afterward is for you, me, all precisely the same. I do not know what is untried and afterward, but I know it will in its turn prove sufficient, and cannot fail. Each who passes is considered, each who stops is considered, not a single one can it fail." You open men's eyes to good even when they suffer ill and you guide them. You try to make them see that it is pain itself that makes one able to perceive beauty; makes one know and understand a new depth to what one sees around him. It is sorrow and lost, rootless searching that makes emotions only hinted at in milder climates stand clear.

To know is proof of the fact that you have struggled for knowledge, for it is only after struggle that anyone declares in resounding chords that his flesh has become a great poem since he has rejected that which insults his soul.

And, now, you become like a guide who leads pioneers through a wilderness land. The path is there to be traveled alone; indeed, you have traveled it alone. No, it is not the only path and each man is free to follow his own choice. You have not written of "The" way but of "A" way. By writing, you are speaking to me through time; through generations of our own kind. By writing you make me a gift for to write is to say, I am the victor, I have fought with myself, with reason, with all past knowledge and even with the universe, and this grain of truth I have won and I will guide you through the wilderness to that truth. As you speak to me and guide me it is a kindness, a giving process. You have fought hard for this truth and you will give it to me if I will reach out for it. You cannot walk the road for me, I must struggle on my own but my struggle should be less than yours because you have marked the path. You will help and when I am beaten down, it is right that you should say, "Were mankind murderous or jealous upon you, my brother, my sister? I am sorry for you, they are not murderous or jealous upon me, All has been gentle with me, I keep no account with lamentation, (What have I to do with lamentation?) And, you shall feel no lamentation for I am a grain of wheat and you are all wheat, both past and present, and you should be at peace about life and at peace with God because in life your path was real and your guide, truth.

After your counseling, I stand alone at the top of a knoll and face eternity and the clock ticks away the minutes that measure the moments that I will live; and I begin. This night I will sleep in a bed; and in the morning, I will put on my boots (each on the proper foot) and in all probability, eat a bowlful of corn flakes . . . and begin. And, the next day . . . begin.

By Noal Hale

Shirley Miller — Self-Portrait

Batik
Mildred Reynolds

Lines by Cindi Oakley

SAD LINE

FRAGMENTED

STRONG

Sounds of Chaos
Sounds of chaos in the air
Sounds of trees that aren't there Nature's signs are all but gone Leaving factories, which give us smog.
Signs of chaos in the air
Leave the woods all but bare,
Signs of life all about Driving people within, without.
Signs of chaos in the air
Someone's dead, people stare
People leave, who gets involved
People have their own little smogs.
Ned Holliman

FRANTIC

love changes people in many ways
I changed-from a quite innocent girl to a woman loving a man but now you also have changed from a man loving one woman to many-
As I slowly sink back into my childhood
Jeannie Clayton

Love
hurts everyone it touches you may think you have been touched but you'll never know till you feel like me-for there are no real words to express how I feel Jeannie Clayton

The love we share
Will last till eternity
The rocks that lie in the road
We will cross together
No matter how many or how hard
With all the trust we have
There will always be a way

How can one small four letter Word hurt so many people-
So many ways-
love

Like a hot branding iron Everyone is left with a Well seen scar
Jeannie Clayton

Gayle Tatarski

Mel's Italian — American Cuisine
306 W. Academy Street
Madison, N.C.
427-3377
Dine in-or-Food to Go

Gayle Tatarski

You are like the rain
That showers on me soft
Your touch a drop Runs down my skin
It tingles and I laugh.
Catherine Russell

October
Sometimes a blown leaf
Will stir a memory
Of when you and I
Were one in June

Then the wind stirs
Through October country
Sweeps the air clean
My mind as well

Now I am one
Content with alone
And only the leaves
To dance the wind

Catherine Russell

Gayle Tatarski

How can I say I am sorry
With all the words in the world Why can't I find the one's I am looking for
And if or when I do find them
Will you hear me-
Will you have turned off your mind-
To me

Will your heart still be open Like the book I write in Or closed tight and stuffed Back up on the dusty shelf
Jeannie Clayton

Promise

Will you kiss me each morning,
Always be true,
And take out the garbage
If I marry you?

Chauvinist — (noun) A male who possesses incredible knowledge and insight into the workings of the female mind, thus eliminating the burdensome need for women to think for themselves.

Sometimes I do believe That the bane of my existence Is the guilt of giving in
To what lowered my resistance.
Catherine Russell

Susan Clayton

BECK & SON FORD, inc.

LIC. NO. 6291

MADISON, NO. CAROLINA

• Phone 427-0211

Susan Clayton

The Sun

Boldly the Sun rises each day
Begins his trek across steel-blue skies,
His fiery beard the rays that sweep
Over the earth in invisible waves.
As he turns his face away from the earth
His garments veiling the crimson skies,
He vainly searches for the beautiful Moon
Who passed that way only hours before.

Catherine Russell

The Moon

Timidly the Moon lifts her milk-white face Softly illumines the Earth below,
Her breath the breeze that cools the air
Raven hair that blankets the sky with night.
It will soon be morn for the Sun arrives Carrying the dawn upon his shoulders,
She quickly fades, too delicate to behold
The shining brilliance of his smile.

Catherine Russell

The waters that lie between us
Seem so shallow now-
Will they still be the same
When you return

Will the waters have risen too high And be too polluted for either of Us to walk across

To meet and talk and embrace each other
As before, if things are kept pure
In our hearts-
The pollution won't ever destroy us.
Jeannie Clayton

Allison Booker

R.M.S.

Traveling down the road To where Do you know
I don't think so Cause I don't know
We'll travel many roads
This I do know
And we'll always end up the same place
Back here Together Traveling
 Jeannie Clayton

If the Gas Goes—

Where Will RCC GO?

Oh, Yea!
We've Got All Kinds of Classes
At RCC

Ronald Hogson

Togetherness . . .

... 'Cause Apathy died at RCC and many HAPPY people . . .

student life

Joyce Culler

RCC's No. 1 Sport . . .

Homecoming '74

Jeannie Clayton — Homecoming Queen

Debate of the year?

Dennis James

Derrek Archer

Susan Clayton

Allison Booker

Gayle Tatarski

Allison Booker

Woodcut
Dennis James

Thomas St. Pierre

Hessie

Hessie Pinnix

Gayle Tatarski

R.S. Hodgson

R.S. Hodgson

Abstract
Lou Ann Boothe

Terry Mayew

Woodcuts

Melissa Amos

R.S. Hodgson

Henderson Moorefield

Self-Portraits

Donna Jackson

Nancy Henley

Cindi Oakley

G. Wilkerson

Hooper & Moore

The Mall Shop

Reidsville, N.C.

2 years and Europe.

Only in Today's Army. Call 919-342-1463

You Have A Personal Banker At Wachovia

Four Famous Names

Fieldcrest

Karastan

St. Marys

Laurelcrest Carpets

... Known For Fashion Leadership

Fieldcrest and St. Marys coordinated fashions for bed and bath, sheets, blankets, automatic blankets, bedspreads, drapes, towels, bath accessories; Karastan and Laurelcrest rugs and carpets.

Beautiful products of FIELDCREST MILLS, INC.

FOR TODAY'S
"IN"
LOOK

BELTS • TIES

Compliments
of Gem-Dandy, Inc.

Tall insurance agency, inc.

P. O. BOX 398 • EDEN, NORTH CAROLINA 27288 •

insurance • bonding •

PHONE 623-3164

Compliments of Southern National. A lot more bank for your money.

CONTRACTORS

SAM W. SMITH, INC.

P. O. Box 428 -- Eden, North Carolina 27288 -- Telephone 919-623-9151

Towne Squire, Ltd.

WASHINGTON STREET
EDEN, NORTH CAROLINA

P. O. BOX 338
EDEN, NORTH CAROLINA 27288

TRUCK LEASING - INTRA STATE RIGHTS

EXECUTIVE OFFICE: P. O. BOX 338
EDEN, NORTH CAROLINA 27288
TELEPHONE 919-627-4811

Reidsville Review
116 N. Scales
Reidsville

The Powell Agency
108 S. Scales
Reidsville

Hodgepodge
Penn-Rose Mall
Reidsville

Popes 5-10-25
N. Scales
Reidsville

Pizza Hut
2009 S. Scales
Reidsville

Dairy Queen Brazier
S. Scales
Reidsville

Wall Realtor's
Kings Highway
Eden

House of Insurance
707 Washington St.
Eden

DONORS

Joe Chandler — Pharmacist
Eden

Madison Book & Record Center
Madison

Reidsville T.V. & Appliance Center
Reidsville

Williams & Company
Reidsville

Link Brothers Pharmacy
Reidsville

Bob Adams' Florist
Reidsville

Pennrose Sunoco
Reidsville

Dr. Robert L. Daniel
Reidsville

Dr. Walter H. Moore
Reidsville

Dr. E.V. Wilkins D.D.S.
Reidsville

Strader's Shoe Store
Reidsville

Haynes & Wilson T.V. & Appliance
Reidsville

Dobbs Florist
Reidsville

City Barber Shop
Reidsville

Spinning Wheel Fabric Shop
Reidsville

Carolina Apothecary
Reidsville

Flower Box
Madison

PATRONS

Chandler Drug Co.
641 Washington St.
Eden

Bill Amos Menswear
613 Washington St.
Eden

Mace's Jewelry & Gifts
132 S. Scales St.
Reidsville

A.G. McInnis, M.D.
Reidsville

D.D. King, M.D.
Reidsville

Julias' Interiors
Eden

Sam Robertson Company
Madison

Dean's Village Shop
Madison

Davis Pharmacy Inc.
Reidsville

Flynn Furniture Company
Madison

McFall Drug Company
Madison

Western Auto
Madison

King & Lee Service Station
Reidsville

Hawkins Rexall Drug Inc.
Madison

This space provided for by a friend.

Compliments
of Rockingham
Community College Bookstore

Cole Jewelers

Serving Reidsville Since 1945

Fine Jewelry
Diamonds — Watches Engraving
Jewelry and Watch Repair

Open 9 AM — 5 PM
Monday thru Saturday

— 222 Settle St . . . 349-5314

When you need a bank . . . we're all the bank
you need.

Eden
Reidsville
Wentworth

NCNB

Setliff's

Penrose Mall — Reidsville
Downtown — Reidsville
Meadowgreen Shopping Center — Eden
Midtown Shopping Center — Madison

Music — Toys — Gifts

HOME Savings and Loan Association

Main Office
722 Washington St.
Phone 623-9787

Eden, N.C. 27288

Insured Savings

Meadow Green Branch
602 S. Van Buren Road
Phone 623-8451

Real Estate Loans

Compliments of

Roses

Pennrose Mall
Reidsville

Compliments of Home Savings and Loans
Eden

TELEPHONE 623-3187

TRI-CITY FINANCE COMPANY
Auto Loans for the Individual

Compliments of

Pace-Stone
Furniture Company

Editor: Ronnie Clark

Advisor: Sarah Jane Moser

Photography Editor: Mike Brame

Photographers: Mike Brame
Bill Shankle
Carl Hook
Jessie Sutton
Fred Del Guercio

Staff: Jody Shumate
Lynn DeHart
Cindy Gentry
Debbie Price
Pam Carter
Fawn Blankship
Susie Clayton

Business Manager/
Editor-in-Chief of Publications: Dennis Martin

Business Staff: Susie Clayton
Jody Shumate
Buddy Hodges
Joyce Trent
Kathy Shipwash
Debbie Price

Assistant Editor: Kathy Shipwash

Special thanks to: Fred Del Guercio
Ed Goldston
Neil McCloud
Debbie Yeatts
Henderson Moorefield

Compliments of
First National Bank of Reidsville

